Open Space Works Cooperative: profile

Open Space Works Cooperative was established as an independent consultant group in 2016. We work together in order to strengthen our competencies in organisational and community building by mutual support and experience sharing. We work with international financial and technical cooperation projects, national foundations, private companies when traditional organization and community development approaches do not work or even harm.

Key Competences

- Stakeholders Analysis and Engagement,
- Organizational and Community Development
- Large Group Facilitation in Open Space, Future Search, World Cafe, ToP

What our clients value

Independence

Being independent from organizational structures and donor funding, we can be objective and uninfluenced in assessing the operating context, potential risks, and possible scenarios for the development interventions.

Deep understanding of the Context

Working with the various clients such as the Government of Ukraine, an international financial and technical cooperation projects, local communities, large and small businesses, NGOs and networks, we can keep pace and understand what is happening now, both in the area of community development as a whole and in separate segments, as well as understand what methods work well and why, and which do not work.

Complex solutions

We understand that the challenges encountered by organizations working in the field of community development require complex solutions. The multidisciplinary experience of each team member allows us to look at the project from different angles and find hidden opportunities, identify risks and manage in advance.

Support at all stages of work

We often do a little more than it is foreseen in the contract, because we understand that community development work has many pitfalls that can not always be reflected in the contract.

Mutual iterative learning

If the implementation of the contract did not bring us as executors and customers new knowledge that allows us to change our habits or approaches, then such a contract can be considered unsuccessful. But so far this has not happened in our practice.

Taras Tymchuk

an independent management consultant, facilitator, research and development expert. His profound expertise in the fields of managing large group conversations, civil society development, international aid development, understanding of contemporary political, social and economic context is backed by 16 years of experience.

Taras is passionate about locating, surfacing and correcting systemic bugs that drop productivity in organizations, communities and businesses. He focuses on group interactions, collective decision-making (and bringing those decisions into reality) to make this world a better place. After 10 years in civil society development sector, Taras went on with his career in the role of an independent consultant and researcher in organizational development and group processes. Over the last 5 years, he has been consulting leading national and worldwide organizations who support reforms and systemic changes in Ukraine.

In Open Space Works Cooperative, Taras facilitates participative group discussions in the Open Space, Future Search, World Cafe formats and promotes these approaches around Ukraine. Taras loves complex tasks that lie on the cross-border of education, participation, gamification and behavioral studies. In his free time Taras writes to his blog about the use of gamification in local community development and Telegram channel about aid and development industry.
