More than two years of Russian military aggression showed a large-scale damage of the medical infrastructure of Ukraine and led to a significant number of injured people both militaries and civilians. Currently, 1537 medical facilities have been damaged, 203 have been completely destroyed, and more than 150,000 adults and children have lost their limbs. According to the World Bank statistic, the losses reached $1.4 billion, while needs for restoration and reconstruction of the medical system amounted $14.2 billion for the period of next 10 years. The key priority of the post-war restoration of human capital and public health is establishing of an effective network of rehabilitation, modern medical centers, departments for reconstructive surgery, prosthetic centers, refurbishment of current healthcare facilities, rebuilding of destroyed ones, and training of specialists. It requires extra funding and support from partner countries and international charitable foundations interested in the restoration of Ukraine.
