

A Soldier's Light, A Builder's Heart

Verse 1

There's a light that shines, though the man has gone,
A soldier's courage, steadfast and strong.
From battles fought to homes he built,
He carried the weight, yet felt no guilt.
With laughter in his heart, and love in his hands,
He's left a mark time can't withstand.

Chorus

Oh, Bob, your spirit's still here,
In the smiles, in the stories, in the memories we hold dear.
You built a life on strength and grace,
Now heaven's your home, but we still see your face.
Oh, Bob, you're never truly gone—
Your legacy of love lives on.

Verse 2

With Linda by your side for forty-seven years,
Through joys and trials, laughter and tears.
Your kids and grandkids, they knew your pride,
With every joke and story, you stood by their side.
The Chevy you fixed, the jokes you told,
You made the world brighter, with a heart of gold.

Chorus

Oh, Bob, your spirit's still here,
In the smiles, in the stories, in the memories we hold dear.
You built a life on strength and grace,
Now heaven's your home, but we still see your face.
Oh, Bob, you're never truly gone—
Your legacy of love lives on.

Verse 3

Now the halls of heaven echo your laugh,
A soldier, a builder, who lived life to the last.
We gather today to honour your name,
With love in our hearts, we'll never be the same.
So here's to you, Bob, in the skies above,
You'll always be our beacon of love.

Chorus

Oh, Bob, your spirit's still here,
In the smiles, in the stories, in the memories we hold dear.
You built a life on strength and grace,
Now heaven's your home, but we still see your face.
Oh, Bob, you're never truly gone—
Your legacy of love lives on.
